The Fire Boss, a small engine plane equipped to scoop water from natural resources to fight wildfires, drops a load over a fire south of Liberty Lake Aug. 4.

Fighting fire with flight

Airport manager keeps close tabs on planes that use water from LL to douse wildfires

By Kelly Moore
SPLASH STAFF WRITER

On Aug. 4, a 10-acre brushfire south of Liberty Lake prompted the Spokane Valley Fire Department to call for air units from the Department of Natural Resources to support safety efforts. As a result, many residents caught a first-hand look at a single engine plane equipped to scoop water from natural resources to drop over the fire, the Fire Boss, in action.

The Splash decided to track down its pilot, Eric Johnson, to find out what kind of protocol lake-goers should follow when the plane is around, and whether he thinks he'll be back around Liberty Lake this season.

Johnson was on call for duty the day our meeting was scheduled, and when it came down to interview time at the Deer Park Airport, he'd already been dispatched to a wildfire near Ellensburg.

Bruce Jourdain, his manager with almost three decades of firefighting and aviation experience, graciously stepped in to answer questions.

Q: Do you work with the pilots as well?

A: Oh yeah. At this point here, I'll get the call from dispatch that says we've got a fire, and we're going to fax it on down. That's when I tell our loader and pilot that we've got a call and they need to start loading the

Trial scheduled in Thola vs. City of Libery Lake

Resolution likely more than a year away

By Kelly Moore
SPLASH STAFF WRITER

Former Trailhead Golf Professional Mollie Thola took almost a year from the time of her termination to prepare and serve a lawsuit against the city, citing employee mistreatment. To hear a resolution on the matter, both parties may have to wait at least another 14 months.

The jury trial on the matter is ordered to commence at 8 a.m. Oct. 21, 2013, in Spokane. The order comes on the tails of a jointly filed report with mutual suggestions for a timeline.

Leading up to the trial, each party is subject to deadlines for additional filings, including expert reports, discovery, witness lists and exhibits. The next deadline pertaining to the case is March 5, when each plaintiff must identify initial expert reports to all parties involved. Defendant expert reports are due April 4. Discovery is due June 3.

An in-person pretrial conference is scheduled for Oct. 8, 2013. During the pretrial conference, parties may dispute certain items planned as evidence.

Thola's initial complaint cites multiple specific incidents taking place at work from the time of her rehire until her termination June 6, 2011, saying Thola was subjected to discrimination, invasion of privacy, harassment and a hostile work environment.

The lawsuit also names her former supervisors, Recreation Coordinator Michelle Griffin and Community Development Director Doug Smith, as defendants.

The lawsuit was originally filed in Spokane County Superior Court of Washington June 13 by Thola, who was laid off in late 2010, then rehired Jan. 3, 2011, then terminated five months later. Her husband, Joseph, is also named as a plaintiff. The couple requests awards for lost wages, emotional stress, mental anguish and legal costs.

According to the lawsuit, Thola was put on a six-month probation upon her rehire. She had a two-month evaluation Feb. 22, 2011, and began weekly performance evaluations March 4, 2011. To her knowledge, the complaint states, no other employees received such frequent evaluations.

Thola said she was also accused of stealing from the city by improperly scheduling, giving and taking money for golf lessons for her own personal benefit while employed. She also claimed that, although no evidence of stealing was ever provided and Thola denies the accusations, the allegations were not kept private and her reputation in the community was harmed.

No monetary amounts were identified in the complaint, requesting "an amount to be proven at trial."

The case was originally filed in Spokane County District Court before being moved to the United States District Court for Eastern Washington. The notice of removal filed by city representation cites an alleged violation of the Fair Labor Act recorded in the complaint, making it more appropriate for federal court.

CV School District approaches 2012-2013 with no budget cuts

By Kelly Moore
SPLASH STAFF WRITER

After facing years of budget constraints, the Central Valley School District reviewed its proposed 2012-2013 budget Monday evening with no cuts and an increase to reserves.

"We're looking at this as a pivot year," CVSD Executive Director of Finance Jan Hutton said. "It's a year that we're seeing funding stability from the state. It's also year of changes within district. This will be year that we kind of let the dust settle a bit."

The $129.6 million budget reflects slight growth from previous years, attributed to a slight increase in enrollment as well as grant funding for the newly purchased Spokane Valley Tech center.

In all, 86.4 percent of the district's $114 million general fund is spent on salaries and benefits. The remaining general funds are split between utilities, insurance, fuel, food and supplies.

Rounding out the budget are the Associated Student Body funds, debt service fund, capital projects fund and the transportation vehicle fund.

Hutton attributed the flush budget, in part, to a state Supreme Court decision, ruling the state was not fulfilling its obligation to fund basic education. She said the decision likely prevented state legislators from making additional cuts to education despite facing a deficit.

Looking forward to the district's updated three-year budgeting plan, Hutton expressed vulnerable areas of funding for the board to consider.

The district will hold a public hearing to gather community input on the proposed budget at its next meeting Aug. 27. Immediately following the hearing, the board will vote on the budget adoption.

Following the budget presentation, the board also reviewed a board procedure update to the district fee collection schedule. Before adopting the revised fee schedule, Board President Debra Long suggested waiving student participation fees for the upcoming year.

"We collected the fees because we needed them," Long said. "We're at a point where I think we can make the case that we can balance the budget and move forward responsibly without participation fees."

Other board members were hesitant to follow Long's lead, noting that participation had actually increased since the initiation of the fees.

"Would I love to see these going away? Yes, but I wonder if it's going to bring the customer satisfaction we think it would," Board Member Amy Mason said.

Other concerns brought up included the likelihood of needing to reinstate the fees later down the road and being able to make that clear to the community.

Ultimately, the board voted to accept the fee schedule with no changes. Board members Keith Clark, Tom Dingus and Amy Mason voted in favor with Debra Long dissenting and MJ Bolt abstaining.

In other business:

- The board approved a recommendation to appoint Rob Curnow as interim director of technology for the upcoming school year. Curnow has been the supervisor for technology for the past two years.

- Superintendent Ben Small said the website for the Spokane Valley Tech center, www.spokanevalleytech.org, will go live on Monday. Here, visitors can view the new logo and find information about upcoming classes. A groundbreaking will be held at the site at 11 a.m. Aug. 29.

- The PACE character trait of the month — gratitude — was noted by the board.

Sports Brief

Shellhorn baffles Indians

Liberty Lake native Rusty Shellhorn, a pitcher for the Everett Aquasox of the Northwest League, returned to town Monday with an impressive performance against the Spokane Indians.

Shellhorn, who was drafted by the Seattle Mariners this year after concluding his collegiate career at Texas Tech, allowed five hits and no runs in six innings against the Indians to lead Everett to a 5-1 victory.

Shellhorn was a standout pitcher for Central Valley High School, where he graduated in 2008.

A Liberty Lake Municipal Library patron uses a computer to search the Internet and browse the library's catalog. Starting Tuesday, the library will operate with a new catalog connected to resources at 25 other libraries.

BANDING TOGETHER FOR BOOKS

LL Municipal Library joins regional network to share titles, system costs

By Kelly Moore
SPLASH STAFF WRITER

Big changes are coming to the Liberty Lake Municipal Library. As the department transitions Tuesday into the Cooperative Information Network (CIN), a consortium of 25 other area libraries, even the most basic library user will see adjustments to services.

"I'm really proud of what we've been able to accomplish by moving into a consortium," Library Director Pamela Mogen said. "We'll still have our autonomy and our own say with how things are run, but we'll be able to work together with all these other libraries to make difficult things easier."

The transition will, among other things, increase titles available to library users, decrease department costs and modify a few library policies.

The most obvious and immediate change for users will be a new library card, issued at the patron's next visit. The new cards will provide full access to any of the CIN libraries, which share titles interchangeably from one library to the next.

The new cards also come with additional key-chain toggles to keep access handy. Moving forward, patrons must have a library card present to check out books. Currently, a photo ID suffices with a member number, but that policy will tighten to align with CIN regulations.

A notable benefit of the transition, Mogen said, was access for Liberty Lake patrons to about 500,000 titles — a sizable increase from the 30,000 holdings held at the library.

"That's a big jump," Mogen said laughing. "That'll make more things available to everyone. ... Anyway you look at it, it's a positive move."

To navigate the titles, patrons will have to learn the ins and outs of a new website for the catalog system. From the site, readers can search the Liberty Lake library only, or choose to search the entire collection spread across all 26 locations. Should a title be available at another library, patrons can request it to be delivered to Liberty Lake for no additional charge through the website. Under normal circumstances, Mogen said a requested title should take about three days to make it to the library.

The new catalog, along with tutorials on how to search for and reserve titles, can be viewed at catalog.cin.bywatersolutions.com/.

To join the CIN, the library board also had to make changes to a few policies regarding fees and check-out periods.

According to Mogen, to comply with the CIN, library fines will go down to 10 cents a day for all overdue items except hardware like flash drives and e-readers. However, the current two-day grace period will no longer exist. In addition, the services will be cut off sooner to patrons accumulating fines. As opposed to the current $10 limit, the library will only allow $3 of accrued fines before refusing services.

Other policy changes allow patrons to check out books for a longer period of time. Currently, regular books can be checked out for three weeks and renewed for an additional three weeks. The new system bumps both options to four weeks.

Initially, the transition's effect on non-resident users was unclear, but Mogen said these users would have access to all CIN services with the exception of the Overdrive e-book and audio book service. These patrons will, however, be able to continue using these services through

How will the CIN transition affect you?

Finding books:

As part of the transition to the CIN, the Liberty Lake Municipal Library will operate with a new catalog. Users may choose to search titles located at the library or search titles located at all 26 locations throughout the network. To explore the new catalog and view tutorials on how to find and reserve books, visit catalog.cin.bywatersolutions.org.

Checking out books:

Users will be issued new cards at their next visit. These cards must be present to check out materials. The new cards can be used at any of the CIN libraries and new books can be checked out for 14 days, all other books for 28 days and magazines and movies for seven days.

Fines and fees:

Fines will be reduced to 10 cents per day with a two-day grace period, however library services will be declined once they're accumulated to $3. Fines are also tallied per person instead of per family.

Requesting titles from other locations:

Requesting books from other libraries will once again be free, including non-CIN libraries. Requesting titles from CIN libraries can be done through the CIN website. Under normal circumstances, titles will be delivered about three days from when it becomes available.

E-books and audio books:

Both resident and non-resident library users will have access to e-book and audio book services, but only residents will be able to use the service through CIN. Non-residents will continue to use the Washington Anytime Library, which is currently used by all patrons, for e-book and audio book services. If non-residents would like access to the CIN e-book and audio book services, a resident CIN card may be purchased at the Post Falls Library for $25 per year.

MORE CHANGES COMING TO THE LIBRARY

In addition to changes associated with the CIN transition, library patrons may also keep an eye out for:

Sept. 10: The library will expand hours to be open from 2 p.m.

to 8 p.m. Mondays. The added hours will supplement the library's current hours of operation Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Thursday from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Sept. 13: The Liberty Lake Library Foundation plans to unveil its finished photo-mosaic project at the library. The installation is the culmination of a yearlong fundraiser for the library.

Sometime before Christmas: The city is scheduled to install a covered entryway with ADA-accessible doors. The project is currently listed on the capital facilities plan as 2012 project.

Get involved

Anyone interested in getting involved has a number of options for helping out around the Liberty Lake Municipal Library:

Board of Trustees: Trustees are responsible for setting the library's future vision, establishing the policies and budget, supporting the library in the community and before city council, and helping to keep it responsive to the community. The board currently has an open position. For more, contact Pamela Mogen at 435-0777.

Library Foundation: The Library Foundation's purpose is to develop a capital fund for the library that will contribute toward large library projects and technological advances. It's most recent fundraising effort will help finance a new covered entrance and automatic doors. For more, contact Sally Waltermire at 927-5878.

Friends of the Liberty Lake Municipal Library: Friends conduct fundraising events, hold the annual tea and help out at library events.

Their activities and dues finance the Summer Reading Program and other events throughout the year. For more, contact Diane Murray at 315-4688.

Volunteer: The library is continually seeking volunteers to teach a skill, share a passion, discuss a topic, help with library chores, create posters and bookmarks or write news stories. To talk about how you can be part of the library's mission, contact Adult Services and Reference Librarian Dan Pringle at 435-0778.

the Washington Anytime Library, the current provider at the library.

In addition, Mogen said children may be issued individual cards (as opposed to the family cards issued now), but a parent or guardian signature will be required to make the account valid.

Mogen said the library first started considering a change when she received notice that current catalog software would no longer be supported in two years. The cost to upgrade to that provider's next level of service was out of the Liberty Lake Municipal Library's budget, she said.

She began researching options and decided Koha, an open-source web-based library system, was the best option for Liberty Lake. Mogen said it was reviewed consistently as the most reliable and stable system.

She then contacted representatives from the CIN libraries in North Idaho to see how Koha worked for them. That was when the Liberty Lake Municipal Library was invited to join the network.

The library staff has been working for months to ensure a smooth transition. A mock site is currently set up to test possible bugs that may arise before the system goes live in Liberty Lake. Final preparations and transfers will be made this weekend. During this time, the online catalog will be down from 4 p.m. Aug. 18 until 10 a.m. Aug. 21.

Perhaps the greatest boon to the library

Liberty Lake Municipal Library Director Pamela Mogen shows a current library card, which will soon be ruled obsolete. Beginning next week, patrons will be issued new Cooperative Information Network (CIN) cards as they come in. The new cards will be valid at all CIN libraries and must be present when checking out books.

is the reduced operating costs. Before, Mogen said maintenance alone on the previous system was $5,000 a year. After paying the initial setup fees, the Liberty Lake Municipal Library will pay an annual $2,500 membership fee to CIN. That includes maintenance.

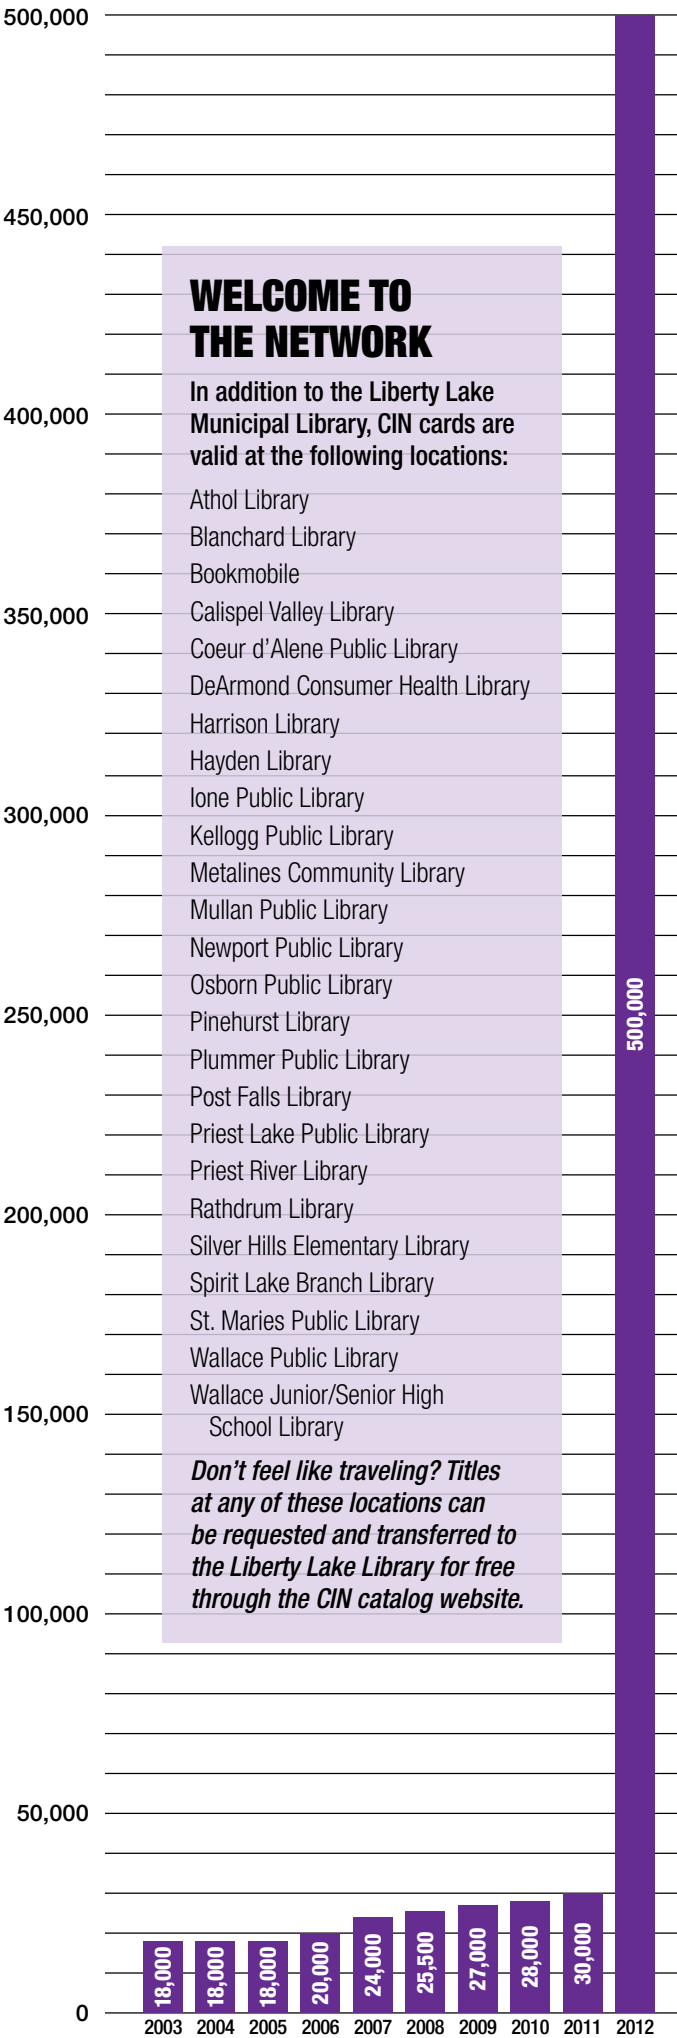

"That's about the deal of the century," Mogen said. "If there's a problem, it's not my problem. It's their problem. I won't have to hire IT people or anything like that. The CIN takes care of it."

"I'm really proud of what we've been able to accomplish by moving into a consortium. We'll still have our autonomy and our own say with how things are run, but we'll be able to work together with all these other libraries to make difficult things easier."

— PAMELA MOGEN

At right: The number of physical resources available to patrons since the library's inception as a city entity in 2003 has steadily increased year by year. However, the transition into the CIN will cause a notable jump in available titles.

Liberty Lake native and former Spokane Chiefs star Tyler Johnson, pictured here with the Norfolk Admirals, will be in town Tuesday with the Calder Cup.

Celebrating a winner

LL has reason to take pride in native Johnson

Tyler Johnson is 5 feet, 9 inches of winner. Overlooked time and again for his small frame in a physical sport, the Liberty Lake native returns to Spokane Tuesday on tour with his latest trophy — the Calder Cup, given to the champions of the American Hockey League. This year, Johnson was a standout rookie for the AHL champion Norfolk Admirals.

This championship doesn't shock people who have followed Johnson's career, which has taken overachievement to the level of championship more often than not (Memorial Cup with Spokane Chiefs, 2008, and World Junior Hockey Championship with Team USA, 2010).

As an Admiral, Johnson was a part of a professional hockey record 28-game winning streak. Individually, he scored 29 goals, 35 assists and 64 points, good for sixth in the AHL in scoring, and was named to the league's All-Rookie Team.

What's more important, Johnson is a winner off the rink — one of the most down-to-earth and likable people you will ever meet, in or out of sports.

His hometown fans can witness this firsthand Tuesday, when Johnson will cart the Calder Cup trophy around town. Get a picture with the cup and visit with Johnson at the Spokane Arena from 11 a.m. to noon, at Frontier Ice Arena in Coeur d'Alene at 2 p.m., or at 6:30 p.m. at Avista Stadium, when Johnson will be on hand to sign autographs for a short time after throwing out the first pitch for the Spokane Indians game.

Show up or don't show up for the fanfare, what endures is this: Liberty Lake continues to have a great ambassador in "Johnny."

Someone knows how paint damage happened

It was very sad to see the paint damage last month at Pumphouse Park, on the corner of Boone and Simpson.

Someone went home with paint on their clothes and body. Somebody knows something, and they should be made to clean the mess. I'm sure I'm not the only one disheartened by this treatment. I would even help clean it if there's a way. I hope they catch who did this.

Q: So what exactly does the Fire Boss do?

A: When our pilots leave here, they go directly to the fire to make their first drop. They always leave here with their first load. After that, they'll look for a water source that's close by. If there are people in the way, he'll make a low pass over the lake in the direction he wants to scoop. Normally, everybody gets out of the way. When he comes back around, get down on the water, deploy the probes and let it fill while he's still scooting along there.

Right now we've got one here under contract. We have another airplane down in Boise right now under contract to the State of Idaho. There's another airplane on a national contract down in Oklahoma. There are three of these aircrafts available in the United States, and they're all spread out right now. One just happens to be here in eastern Washington.

Q: Do you ever have issues with people who don't get out of the way?

A: It's been pretty good. Every now and then it gets congested out on the lake, like some weekends or holidays are really bad. We'll try to find a lake without a lot of traffic on it, but sometimes you don't have a lot of options depending on where the fire is. Normally, it runs pretty smoothly either way. Every now and then we'll come across someone that wants to confront the airplane. We'll break off on something like that and notify the dispatch office, who will deploy the local sheriff's department. They'll go out and take care of it.

We're not going to fight with any watercraft. If they decide they don't want to move, or want to play chicken, then we'll go to another water source. But we leave it up to law enforcement to take care of any problems like that.

Q: So, if people are out on the lake and see the plane making a low pass, is there a protocol for exactly what they are supposed to do?

The Bureau of Indian Affairs' Single Engine Airtanker Manager Bruce Jourdain poses outside the Deer Park Airport. Jourdain works as a liaison between the government and contractors like the ones who provide wildfire-fighting planes.

A: If they see the plane make a low pass over the lake, they should probably clear the area that he came down. That'll probably be the lane he's going to need to use to reload the aircraft. A lot of times it's more than once, too. They're going to see him coming back for about three hours, refilling over and over again. Boaters should yield and stay back as far as possible. It's a 60-foot wingspan on the aircraft, and if there's anything that could go wrong, the pilot doesn't want to hurt anyone on the lake.

Q: How often do you guys pull from Liberty Lake?

A: Usually it's at least once, sometimes twice a year that we'll have fires down in that area where Liberty Lake is one of the closest points to pick up water. Whatever is closest to the fire, we'll utilize that for making a quick turnaround to support the ground forces. Anything where you can come back within a 5- to 10-minute time limit is good for us. We've gone a little further in some cases.

Q: How long does the plane stay out on each call?

A: If there's a good water source nearby, sometimes we can be over a fire for three hours. In that time, if there's a good close source, we can drop 20 to 40 800-gallon loads over the fire.

Q: So each drop is 800 gallons, then?

A: Each drop is usually about that much. The pilot can regulate the amount of water he takes on board. It's all computer controlled. He can vary how much water he's able to pick up depending on how much fuel he has, the temperature or altitude.

Q: Is there a filter or something that keeps the plane from picking up anything it wouldn't want, like swimmers?

A: The probe is really about a three-inch pipe. When the pilot lets those down, he's still skimming the water at 60-70 knots. That pushes the water up into the tank, which is forward of where the pilot sits. They're not very big, so the stories you might read in some of the tabloids that say they picked up a frog-man and dropped him over the fire probably aren't true. It's a great story, though.

Q: Do you ever get any noise complaints from these planes?

A: The Fire Boss isn't really loud like some aircraft are. It's more of a high-pitched whine. There's really never been a noise issue with this type of aircraft. CL215s, the super scoopers, make a lot of noise. It sounds like a herd of Harleys coming down the highway. The Fire Boss is pretty quiet, relatively. In fact, a lot of times you won't even hear him coming in.

Q: Do people ever not realize who you guys are or what's happening?

A: At first, when we move into an area, I think so. It kind of looks just like a big float plane so they usually just don't pay attention until he starts getting down and making that low pass. By then, most people figure something is up and get out of the way.

In the old days, we used to put sirens on these aircrafts. Nowadays, we just have flashing lights that flash as he's working. They got away from it for some reason, but now they're talking about going back to that again.

Q: What do you think is the importance of having these planes available?

A: It's a real quick response in addition to an initial attack of wildfires. The ability to refill from lakes and rivers nearby helps out the folks on the ground quite a bit. I've used them working ground fires before I was doing this, and it's a great resource to have. With a water source nearby, they're up making drops every 5 to 10 minutes. That helps out a lot when you have that water to cool down the fire. It makes everyone's job on the ground a lot easier.
